HI THERE

MELBOURNE, VIC

Recruiters, Hiring Committees, etc,

I'm excited for the opportunity to join your team, and I believe my experience makes me a strong fit for any frontend or full-stack development role. Over the past 3 years, I've worked as part of a close-knit dev team building a marketing platform that helps businesses create and manage Google Ads using in-house machine learning and AI tools. It's been an incredibly rewarding experience where I've continued to grow as a developer, and I'm now looking to take the next step by contributing to a new team doing meaningful and challenging work.

In my current role, I work primarily in Vue.js, building components and views that display campaign performance data through APIs and AWS services, all backed by a Django-based system. I've learned a lot about writing clean, scalable code in a production environment, collaborating with designers and backend devs, and improving user experiences by translating data into clear, usable interfaces.

In addition to my current role, I also bring experience from my time as a freelance developer and my diploma in Interactive Media Design from Fanshawe College, where I focused on modern web technologies and best practices. Over the years, I've built a skillset that includes:

- Proficiency in HTML5, CSS3/SASS, and JavaScript (Vue and React).
- Experience building sites using platforms like Webflow, Shopify, and WordPress.
- Integration and creation of REST APIs using backend languages like Node, Django, and PHP.
- Use of design tools in the Adobe Suite and Figma for UI/UX work and prototyping.
- Translating designs and wireframes into responsive, polished frontend code.

Before moving into tech, I worked in logistics and operations management, where I led teams and implemented process improvements. That background helped shape the way I work in dev teams—communicative, organized, and focused on building systems that work well and scale effectively.

As you'll see in my resumé, I'm someone who thrives in collaborative environments, communicates clearly, and is always looking to grow. I'd love to speak more about how I can contribute to your team and the work you're doing. You can reach me at gavinbrown025@gmail.com to arrange a time to chat.

Thanks for your time,
Gavin Brown
